

I am very disturbed that the government is even trying to gain the legal right to monitor private citizens internet access. I understand that there are issues of national security involved, but if the efforts to stop the psychotic fringe elements of society from engaging in acts of terrorism transforms this country into a police state where the innocent have their rights to privacy taken away, then these terrorists WIN. I think walking down this path is taking yet another step away from the democracy that makes this country what it is.
